ROOSEVELT'S SMOOTH PLAN

May Result in Breaking the Deadlock in Peace Conference.

BUY BACK SAKHALIN.

Some Indications That the Japanese Would Accept the Compromise.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 23.—The Associated Press is now in position to reveal substantially the suggestion of President Roosevelt for breaking the existing deadlock in the peace negotiations and rescuing the conference from failure. His solution would ingeniously permit the satisfaction of the Japanese demands for reimbursement for the cost of the war and at the same time enable Russia to face the world with the declaration that she had not ceded a foot of territory or paid a kopeck of war tribute to the victor.

The Compromise Plan.

The solution is the one which has heretofore been described in the Associated Press dispatches as the natural and logical compromise. Tersely stated, it consists in an agreement by Russia to purchase possession of either all or half of the island of Sakhalin now in the military occupation of the Japanese for a sum the amount of which, if the two countries cannot agree, shall be decided by some method of arbitration hereafter to be determined. The purchase money, together with the sum Japan would obtain from the cession of the Chinese Eastern Railroad and the maintenance of the Russian prisoners in Japan would, it is estimated, about equal the amount claimed by Japan as her bill for the cost of the war. Possibly, therefore, the solution offered by the President involves recession by Japan upon Article 5 (the cession of Sakhalin) and recession by Russia upon Article 9 (indemnity). It seems practically certain, though this cannot be affirmed positively, that the President today was able to give M. Witte substantial assurance that Japan would be willing to accept such a compromise. This is apparently supported by the authoritative Japanese statement made to the Associated Press tonight in the reply to a question as to whether Japan had not decided to make substantial concessions: "It all depends upon Russia."

A long cable message from St. Petersburg, which is believed to be the Russian reply, arrived about 10 o'clock last night, and M. Witte's secretaries, Mr. Nabukoff and Mr. Plancon, immediately began deciphering it.

ALICE GETS AN OFFER.

Sultan of Jolo Proposes to President's Daughter.

Jolo, Philippine Islands, Aug. 21.—Miss Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the President, was introduced to the Sultan of Sulu at the parade ground today. His majesty was so smitten that he promptly offered his hand in marriage. The Sultan is unable to speak English and made love through an interpreter in the presence of his retinue and the Taft party. Miss Alice begged to be excused. The party then attended a bull fight.

Frederick O'Brien, editor of the Cable News, was seized with cramps while bathing and the undertow was rapidly carrying him out when Congressman Nicholas Longworth, of Cincinnati, Ohio, rescued him at the risk of his life.

Miss Jean McKee entertained a few couples of the young people last evening, in honor of her charming guest, Miss Celeste Cuthbertson, of Bowling Green.

WORST OVER IN NEW ORLEANS.

But Fever Situation Still Serious Outside of the City.

DEATHS PASS 200 MARK.

Sixty-Nine Cases at Leeville and Fifteen New Cases at Patterson.

New Orleans, Aug. 23.—With the fever checked in the city and plans under way to prevent further reinfection from the country, the local situation is still encouraging. Of the new foci, eight are above Canal street; one is in Rosa Park, a fashionable residence park, opening into St. Charles avenue, a well known citizen and a member of Gov. Blanchard's staff being the victim. Another case is at a boys' college far down town; one of the employees being stricken. The Rev. Father Aveille, pastor of St. Maurice church, is another patient reported to-day. Of the deaths, only one occurred up town, and he was a clerk who had been living here nine months. Report to 6 p. m. yesterday:

New cases	67.
Total to date	1,503.
Deaths	9.
Total	214.
New foci	21.
Total	342.
Under treatment	319.

Serious Situation.

The news from outside the city shows the continued seriousness of the situation from that point. Definite information was received from Dr. J. A. Devron, the State Board physician sent to Leeville, at the mouth of Bayou Fourche, a few days ago. His report shows that the first news from there was not exaggerated. During two days of work there he found the following:

Sixty-nine positive cases of fever, fifty-three suspicious cases and 145 cases of dengue. He adds:

"There are about 300 houses and families here, and I do not think there is a single house here which has not one or more cases of sickness. The people are distressed. All seem to have lost ambition to work. They are completely demoralized."

He asks for more doctors and nurses, as the situation is beyond the capacity of one man. He reports two more deaths since his arrival.

Fifteen New Cases.

Patterson reports fifteen new cases and no deaths.

St. Tammany parish reports a positive case on the road between Mandeville and Lewisburg, which came from New Orleans.

Hanson City reports six new cases. Kenner reports one new case. There was one death on Elizabeth plantation in Iberville.

Sarpy plantation reports two new cases.

St. Rose, in St. Charles parish, has two cases and one is dead.

Corinne plantation, in St. Bernard parish, below the city, reports one death, an Italian boy, whom the inexperienced nurse allowed to eat a fish, or red banana and rice, when he should have been denied all food. Mississippi City reports three new cases and says the report that the State Board had declared the fever epidemic there is unfounded.

YOUTHFUL BRIDE.

CHANGED IN AN HOUR

BY HANNAH HOPPER.

Apicture! A woman half-kneeling over a heap of thine-stained letters lying loose on the carpet. Her form slight and graceful, her limbs dark and waving and falling loosely to her waist. Her white hands clasped firmly together and her great eyes raised beseechingly to Heaven. The twilight gathering silently and stealthily about her. A single ray from the almost somber west stealing in the half-opened window, and falling, not upon the kneeling form, but upon the confused heap of old letters.

A moun, despairing and hopeless, came from the half-parted lips, and the picture was changed. The hands were unclasped and drew, in a kind of shuddering yet tender way, the yellow missives toward the beating heart—the head was bowed, until the face was buried among the letters, and then sob after sob shook the slender form.

"And this is the end of all my hopes and beautiful dreamings," she said. "I must bid farewell to all the tenderness, the sentimentality, the fond, fond musings, the adoring love which for years made my life blessed. I thought that I had conquered the pain, the heartache, that I could drop these letters one by one upon the shining coats, and feel no pang, but I cannot."

She arose, lighted a candle, knelt again upon the carpet, and placed the candle by her side.

One by one she took the cherished missives, and, holding them tremblingly in the blaze, saw them burn to a cinder. Over one she hesitated, and half quivering pressed it to her lips.

"This is the first," she said, "in which he mentioned love."

She drew it from the wrapper, and unfolded it. The first words she saw were: "Dear Jewel," "How those beautiful words had looked to her when she saw them the first time! Her heart had thrilled with an inexpressible joy, and she had slept that night with the letter upon her bosom, and could hardly sleep for the happiness that was flooding her soul. The memory of that great joy came rushing back, as she held the letter in her trembling hand.

Could she burn that which had made her once so very, very happy? "No," she said, slowly, and slipping it back into its wrapper, she pressed it again to her lips, and then placed it carefully in her bosom.

All of the others she consumed in the blaze of the candle. Then she arose, extinguishing the light, knelt at the window, and gazed mournfully into the "infinite meadows of Heaven," where the stars were blossoming one by one.

"Life is so strange," she mused; "and joys are so fleeting and so few. Once I knelt at this window without a shadow to mar the perfect happiness of my heart. I could not think of grief then. I could not think that sorrow could ever come to me, everything seemed so fair, so beautiful, so true. I had a bell-toll ring upon my finger as I have now, but how differently I looked upon that from what I do upon this. I remember how I kissed it and blessed the giver, asking Heaven to keep him with you. Take me back to my husband immediately."

He tried to draw her toward him and told her how he loved her, and that he could not live her any more. She became angry and frightened.

"Let me go," she cried, "or I will scream for help!"

He placed his hand across her mouth and held her firmly. She struggled to free herself, but there was no use; she could do nothing, and the carriage rolled away.

They had ridden but a short distance when Helen opened her eyes, and in an instant the truth flashed upon her.

"Stop, Aubrey Milton," she cried. "I would rather die than go with you. Take me back to my husband immediately."

He tried to draw her toward him and told her how he loved her, and that he could not live her any more. She became angry and frightened.

or years betrothed lovers, but at last he had gone away, and she heard no more from him, and grew tired of waiting and watching, and finally was told that he was also. Years went by, and she could not forget him. At last, when Hugh Gordon asked her to be his wife, she had told him all, and then, as he said desired her to be his own, she promised, and a week the marriage vows would be taken.

The days passed quickly away and the twilight of the marriage came stealing on. There were few guests, and all seemed very quiet, and even sad, as if they were somewhat influenced by the sadness of the bride.

The words were said that made them man and wife, the congratulations were over, and the guests grew more gay, and laughed and chattered together merrily. Helen, now the wife of Hugh Gordon, threw a shawl about her, and, unseen, stepped out upon the broad piazza. The moon threw a thousand beams from the cloudless sky, and the wind sighed and sobbed in the great pine tree near the door. She looked down the shady, quiet walk, and a desire arose in her heart to visit the old rustic seat at the foot of the garden where she had spent so many happy and innocent hours in the days forever flown. Noiselessly she glided beneath the great trees and soon came to the retired nook she sought, but the seat was occupied. She was about to turn and go back to the house, when the occupant, a slender man, wearing a loose overcoat, sprang up and approached her.

"Helen," he said, in a deep, thrilling voice, "Helen, is it you?" She took a step toward him, and, forgetting everything, only that her love was near her, she cried, eagerly:

"Oh, Aubrey, Aubrey Milton, how came you here?"

In a moment his arm was about her.

"I am here," he cried, passionately, "to see you, Helen. My wife has been dead one year to-day, and I never loved her as I love you, and I have come to ask you to be my wife."

She sprang away from him. "It is too late!" she exclaimed. "I was married more than an hour ago to Hugh Gordon."

"But you do not love him," he said, approaching her; "and you must be mine. Fly with me, Helen, and we will live in perfect bliss. What care we for the world? Your husband and your friends need never hear from you—throw that shawl into the river and they will think you are drowned."

She listened, and the tempter urged her to do as he desired, but her pure heart could do no wrong, and she turned to flee from the man who was urging her to sin, but she was too weak; a mist was before her eyes, and she fainted in his arms.

With the fleetness of wind he bore her through the garden walk and out into the highway, and, with the assistance of the driver, placed her in his carriage, and springing quickly to her side, the carriage rolled away.

They had ridden but a short distance when Helen opened her eyes, and in an instant the truth flashed upon her.

"Stop, Aubrey Milton," she cried. "I would rather die than go with you. Take me back to my husband immediately."

He tried to draw her toward him and told her how he loved her, and that he could not live her any more. She became angry and frightened.

"Let me go," she cried, "or I will scream for help!"

He placed his hand across her mouth and held her firmly. She struggled to free herself, but there was no use; she could do nothing, and the carriage rolled away.

They had ridden but a short distance when Helen opened her eyes, and in an instant the truth flashed upon her.

"Stop, Aubrey Milton," she cried. "I would rather die than go with you. Take me back to my husband immediately."

"Hold, there!" a voice from the outside cried, and with a joyful heart Helen recognized it as the voice of her husband.

In a moment the carriage door was forced open, and the frightened wife sprang into the arms of her husband, weeping for joy. Inantly, on finding they were discovered, Aubrey Milton sprang from the door on the opposite side of the carriage and fled. They would have pursued him, but Helen said, as she clung to her husband:

"He will not trouble us again, dear Hugh, let him escape."

The driver was ordered to turn about and drive them back to the house, and the anxious guests never greeted a happier or more loving bride. Her feelings were revolutionized. The old love died out of her heart, and she loved her husband better than she had ever loved another.

The letter which the week before she had saved, feeling that she could not destroy it, she consigned to the flames without a struggle or a pang, and life was more beautiful to her than ever before. She soon learned that her noble lover was dissipated and worthless, and undoubtedly sought her, hoping to marry her and thereby gain possession of her wealth. She never saw him again, and lives happily and contentedly with her noble husband.—N. Y. Weekly.

WHY SO WEAK?
Kidney Trouble May Be Sapping Your Life Away.

Hopkinsville people have learned this fact. When a healthy man or woman begins to run down without apparent cause, becomes weak, languid, depressed, suffers backache, headache, dizzy spells and urinary disorders, look to the kidneys for the cause of it all. Keep the kidneys well and they will keep you well. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys and keep them well. Here is Hopkinsville testimony to prove it.

James A. Twyman, brick mason, 1230 South Virginia street, says: "Disorders of the kidneys brought on in my case so sharp and continued a succession of pains and aches throughout my back that I could not rest comfortably at night and arose in the morning lame and sore. I was tired and worn out from morning to night. The kidney secretions were irregular, high-colored and scalding and deposited a heavy sediment I allowed to stand. I had no energy left and felt generally run down. I was feeling worse than usual when my attention was attracted by an advertisement of Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a box at A. Johnson's drug store and began using them. In a few days I felt better and the secretions assumed a natural appearance and the pain and aching had been greatly relieved and by the time I had completed the box there was a wonderful change in my condition. I am glad to state that I am practically cured and Doan's Kidney Pills will be my friend for life."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50c. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

As Done in Norway.
In Norway on pay days saloons are closed and savings banks open at midnight. Servant girls hire for half a year at a time by contract at public registry office. There is a telegraph on every street car. One writes the message, puts on the right number of stamps and drops it in the box. Farmers can borrow money from the government at three per cent. There are practically no illiterates. The average wage earnings are $88 a year. There are more reindeer than horses, more sheep than cows.

Herbine
Renders the bile more fluid and thus helps the blood to flow; it affords prompt relief from biliousness, indigestion, sick and nervous headaches, and over-indulgence in food and drink. G. L. Caldwell, Agt. M. & T. L. P. Co., Chicago, Ind. Ter. writes, April 18, 1903: "I was sick for over two years with enlargement of the liver and spleen. The doctors did me no good, and I had given up all hope of being cured, when my druggist advised me to use Herbine. It has made me sound and well." 50c. Sold by Cook & Higgins.

Mr. Chas. D. Adams is quite ill of flux at his home at Church Hill.

To Cure Cold in One Day

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable." "The one magazine I feel I must take." "The world under a field-glass." "An education in public affairs and current literature."—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely new and above this review, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly. Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost. Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

GERMAN SMOKE NUISANCE.

Efforts Made in Cities of That Country to Overcome the Annoyance.

Germany has its smoke nuisance as well as Washington, as appears from an official report made by United States Consul General Guenther at Frankfurt, in which he says:

"For several years past the state governments of Germany have given attention to the smoke nuisance. The stoppage of the chief source of excessive smoke by training firemen to be more expert and careful has been tried recently, and the formation of smoke can be reduced in this way to a great degree. The proper construction and management of steam boilers and the prevention of explosions has received careful attention through police regulations and continued examinations by official experts. The daily care of boilers, however, has been very often intrusted to ignorant firemen, as the instruction instituted by a few industrial associations has not been adequate and the owners of steam plants frequently failed to show sufficient interest in the thorough training of their firemen. For the purpose of supplying a remedy the ministry of commerce and trade three years ago instituted 'traveling courses of instruction for firemen,' by which more than 500 men have been taught.

"The instruction is given in 14-day courses and comprises theoretical and practical instruction by an academically trained engineer and a competent fireman. Its object is not only the prevention of smoke, but a safe and economical treatment of steam boilers, so that not only the public interest but that of the owners of boilers is taken into account. These continued courses are given wherever a sufficient attendance can be expected. The state bears a part of the expenses and from time to time sends out expert firemen to visit steam plants in order to watch the boiler attendants, call their attention to mistakes or defects, and give them practical instruction with reference to firing and safety appliances. Only when the services of the expert are desired for several days does a fee have to be paid. The interest shown in the instruction is constantly increasing, and its value, based upon the results obtained, is more and more appreciated."

WOMEN AND JIU-JITSU.

American Exponent of the Art Asserts That There Is No "Weakness."

Mr. H. Irving Hancock, journalist, author, war correspondent and traveler, is now associated in the public mind as the American exponent of jiu-jitsu, says the Critic. During more than seven years Mr. Hancock has been preparing himself for the writing of books on this subject by taking instruction under Japanese teachers both in this country and in Yokohama and Tokio. Not long ago Mr. Hancock was laid on the shelf with the injured, by a pupil who was taking the third lesson—and by a woman at that! While laid up, and with one foot propped on a rest, Mr. Hancock was visited by many of his friends who professed their sympathy. They were met with the information that no sympathy was desired—that instead of wishing condolence he was delighted that the thing had happened. He has no patience with the excuse, "the weaker sex." He holds that, where other conditions are equal, a woman should be as strong as a man. Mr. Hancock, with his clothing on, does not look like an athlete. He is five feet six inches in height, and weighs 160 pounds. He does not look as if he weighed more than 130. He is broad of shoulder and of large chest expansion, but is small in his limbs. He claims to have the average Japanese build in all but weight. Mr. Hancock's wife is five inches shorter than he is, and weighs some 20 pounds less, but he has trained her to such a degree of skill in the Japanese feats of combat that she is able to throw him at will when she can succeed in securing the proper holds.

FIVE HUNDRED WHALES DIE

They Go Ashore in an Inlet in the Straits of Magellan and Perish.

"I saw 500 whales ashore at one time in the Straits of Magellan," said Capt. James Heylet, of the British navy, at the Union depot, reports the Milwaukee Free Press. "Some years ago my ship lay off Pearl inlet, a small creek a mile and a half long, opening into Port Salvador which in turn opens into the South Atlantic by a very narrow opening. One morning a whirling appeared to be approaching over the water in the Bay of San Salvador, and soon this was made out to be an enormous school of whales, so thick that they seemed to be jostling each other. Nothing was seen but fins and tails and the water in foam all around.

"This was in a flowing tide, and they came into the inlet itself describing sort of cycloidal curves until the shoreline part of the squadron took on a kelp reef. Then a sudden pause seemed to seize them all, and the unfortunate animals went up the inlet full speed, with the sea boiling in upon them and a great wave coming over them, and they piled up in hundreds on the beach. Then, as there was a rising tide, they got off again, but only to charge the opposite beach, and this was continued till the following tide and loss of strength left them high and dry all round the dreary bay.

"Very few, old or young, lived more than a quarter of an hour after their final stranding. Some died quietly, others beat the sand and water with their tails, drying the water with their blood. By evening, after that tide had ebbed, there were only five whales afloat out of the more than 500 that had come into the inlet so majestically that morning.

"Next day only three were to be seen. They swam around for awhile and then, as if disdaining to live when all their companions were dead, they made straight for the beach, and in a few minutes had passed out of existence. The whales were from four to thirty feet long, the four-foot whales being last born."

SAVING THE SEA BIRDS.

Relentless Slaughter Has Extirpated Many Species in the Pacific Islands.

No one knows better than the sailor or the shore hunter how the sea birds may be exterminated, and no one better than the Indian or the trapper of the deep woods, how sometimes the wildest and most abundant species may disappear. The wonderful great auk, or garefowl, has, within the memory of men now living, been hunted from the face of the earth, so that its skin and its eggs are now worth their weight in gold, says the New York Mail. Practically the beautiful wild pigeon, which once darkened the skies with its vast, cloud-like flight, has met the same fate, though small colonies of it in remote spots undoubtedly still exist. The eastern pinnated grouse, almost practically extinct, in the Chatham Islands, alone, in the Pacific, 17 species of birds have become extinct.

On all the islands of the sea, and at all the shore spots to which sea birds resort, the work of slaughter is being carried on quite relentlessly. Largely for humane reasons, and incidentally in the interest of science, the National Association of Audubon Societies is engaged in the work of trying to save the sea birds from extermination. Several species are being systematically destroyed for their feathers. Fashion, of course, does not care whether those beautiful creatures are exterminated or not. The scarcer they become, up to the point of their actual disappearance, the greater are the prices realized for their feathers, and the deeper the joy taken by the wearer of the ornament. And when at last they are all gone—why, there will be another of God's creatures to put through the same process.

This association has 40 wardens guarding some of the key colonies of these sea birds. This may guarantee them from total destruction at present, but does not insure the maintenance of the birds of the species in question in such numbers as to render their preservation sure. Instead of 40 wardens the society ought to have 300.

NO PARDONS

Says Gov. Beckham For Woodruff and Drake.

A communication from Governor Beckham was received here Tuesday stating that he had carefully reviewed the facts relating to the arrest, trial and sentence of John Woodruff and Francis Drake and had come to the definite conclusion that the case was not one to warrant executive clemency. Woodruff and Drake are serving life sentences in the penitentiary for complicity in the murder of Deputy Sheriff Robt. H. Coffey.

The trial was one of the hardest fought in the history of the county. The defendants were members of the miners' union, which with relatives and friends rallied to their support. There was a strong array of legal talent on both sides and every point was warmly contested. Deputy Sheriff Coffey was killed during the labor troubles at Empire in 1901, while pursuing a party of strikers who had fired on nonunion men on the way to work in the mines. Recently an effort has been made to secure pardons for Drake and Woodruff.

GO. D. GOES INTO CAMP TOMORROW.

Full Complement of Two Officers and Fifty-Two Men.

BIG TIME IS EXPECTED.

Soldier Boys Will Make a Big Record While at Camp Yeiser.

After weeks of constant drilling, Company D, of the Kentucky State Guard, will leave tomorrow morning in a special car attached to the 11:15 I. C. train for Paducah to go into camp for 8 days.

Col. Henry and Capt. Gordon Nelson will go down to Camp Yeiser today to investigate the status of affairs before the company's arrival.

Adjutant C. Henry Tandy and Quartermaster Chas. W. Head will go with the company, which will be under command of Capt. Edward W. Clark. Gov. Beckham and staff will be present at the opening of the camp.

Capt. Clark has been drilling his company continually for weeks. The boys are anxious to be off to the scene of what will be one of the happiest times of their soldier life. They have been on the qui vive for some time, attending every drill promptly and cheerfully and they expect to make a record as the best drilled company in the State. Active military life is what they are looking forward to and no duty of camp life will be onerous or distasteful. They are going there for the fun they can get out of a conscientious discharge of every duty called upon to perform, and their friends here expect them to come home with a record that neither they nor their friends will be ashamed of.

They will leave with all the officers and men permitted under the law—52 men and 2 officers, and our people wish everyone a happy time from start to finish.

Telling the Age of Eggs.

There is nothing that is more of an enigma than the average commission house egg. The age of an egg is as much of a mystery as the age of a lady who has at least arrived at the age of majority. We have seen persons at hotels who would like to know the age of eggs that have been served to them.

One egg looks like another, and an aged egg is not very much different from one less antique. The man who has made a study can tell a strictly fresh egg from one that has been longer in the warehouse but there is still something about an egg that one feels like giving it the benefit of the doubt.

What the commission man would like to know is to be able to tell at a glance a fresh from a stale egg. This he would like to know without handling. The buyer would like to be able to do the same thing, and the customer is just as much in need of this ability as any of the handlers.

The United States consul, located in Germany writes something in regard to a recent discovery in that country which has a bearing on distinguishing the age of an egg. He says: It is based upon the fact that the air chamber at the flat end of the egg increases with age. If the egg is placed in a saturated solution of common salt it will show an increasing inclination to float with the long axis vertical. A scale is attached to the vessel containing the salt solution so that the inclination of the floating egg toward the horizontal can be measured. In this way the age of the egg can be determined almost to a day. A fresh one lies in a horizontal position at the bottom of the vessel; an egg from three to five days old shows an elevation of the flat end, so that its long axis forms an angle of 20 degrees. With an egg eight days old the angle increases to 45 degrees; with an egg 14 days to 60 degrees, and with one three weeks old to 75 degrees, while an egg a month old floats vertically upon the pointed end."—Poultry Item.

Treatment of Limberneck.

A quick cure will be found in giving the afflicted bird four or five drops of turpentine in a spoonful of water and for a preventative provide two or three table-spoonfuls of hypo-sulphite of soda in each gallon of water, and do not allow fowls to drink any other water. Where the fowls seem to be weak and vitality waning give them a pill of asafoetida the size of a pea each day until the bird has fully recovered. Do not allow the fowls to eat the carcasses of dead fowls or animals, as it is generally admitted by our best poultry breeders that such filthy habits of fowls and carelessness on the part of the attendant will quickly produce limberneck and kindred diseases, such as round worm, veritigo, etc. Give the fowls intelligent attention, with clean, wholesome food, provide plenty of good sharp grit and charcoal, and you will have but little trouble in future with such diseases.—S. P. Courier.

California Leghorns.

In speaking of the origin of domestic fowls, The Nebraska Farmer goes deep into ancient history of China and the Orient. On one point he is very explicit—that is, when he states that California is almost the same to the Eastern people as a foreign country; the soil, climate, scenery, trees, buildings, people and methods of selling and buying are so different that it is natural for the Eastern inhabitant to imagine that he is in a foreign land when he goes there. The poultry cultivation of California is becoming so extensive as to make them almost a locality to themselves. We have been told that one can see more White Leghorns on the square mile of ground near Petaluma than would be found in any other locality in the world.—Am. Fancier.

Value of the Incubator.

The incubator is a great machine and the few poultry raisers who do not own one now will at some time in the future. The machine is a better money-maker than the hen. The incubator will not be driven from the nest by mites and lice; it won't get contrary and decline to set; it doesn't get foolish and smash the eggs; it smearing the nest so that the unbroken eggs won't hatch, and it does not sit long enough to hatch one chick out of twenty and go off with it, forgetting to come to hatch the rest.—Farm Magazine.

LITTLE GIRL'S NECK BROKEN.

By a Frightened Horse on Campbell Street Yesterday.

RUN OVER ON PAVEMENT

Animal Was Hitched to Produce Wagon of L. F. Wade.

Champe-Carter, the 7-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus T. Brannon, was run over and killed early yesterday morning by a vegetable wagon.

Louis F. Wade had stopped at the residence of Rev. W. F. Cashman, on South Campbell street, not far from the L. & N. crossing, and left his horse unhitched and was standing at the gate when the horse became frightened at a passing train and ran north down the middle of Campbell street until reaching the residence of Chief of Police Shanklin. There were a number of vehicles standing on the west side of the street, when the horse swerved to the east side and the horse or wheels struck the little girl, breaking her neck. Mrs. Shanklin saw the horse coming at a terrible speed and gave the alarm, but it was too late for the little girl, who was playing on the curbing with her younger sister, Rose, and Mr. John L. Brasher's little daughter, Daisy Lee, and the nurse. The other children got out of the way just in time to save their lives, but could give no aid to Champe-Carter. Mrs. Shanklin was the first lady to reach the child, quickly followed by Mrs. Brasher and the mother of the child. It was taken into the home of Mr. Brasher, where Mr. Brannon and his family are boarding, but it was evident that the child had sustained fatal injury. Drs. Stites and Jackson were at once summoned by telephone, but the child had breathed her last before they arrived. An examination was made and it was found that the child's neck had been broken.

Relatives of the parents were at once notified by wire of the terrible death of the child. Prof. and Mrs. James G. Brannan, who are now residing at Grand Rapids, Wis., are the parents of the bereaved mother, Mrs. Gertie Brannon. Mr. Gus Brannon was formerly of Owensboro, but located here a few months since with the intention of organizing another bank. They were boarding at South Kentucky College until the last of this month, when they took rooms and board in the home of Mr. John L. Brasher, on South Campbell street. They have one little girl left, Rosa, who bears the name of her grandmother, a teacher in the public schools here from the time of the completion of the building until the close of the last term.

The mother and father were prostrated at the way their child had been taken from them, but their numerous friends rendered every aid in their power in this the darkest hour of their lives. The deepest sorrow is felt by those who knew little Champe-Carter, who was an unusually winsome and bright child, and the sympathy of the whole community goes out to the bereaved father and mother.

Mr. Wade, who owns the horse that caused the death of the child, is a market gardener. He is greatly troubled at the occurrence, and is only blameable in leaving his horse to stand unhitched. This is the custom with most men who retail vegetables about the city, and as Mr. Wade was standing at the gate in front of the residence of one of his customers less, probably, than 20 feet away, he can hardly be blamed. We learn that the horse did not start off as a wild gallop, but the efforts of Mr. Wade and others to stop him only frightened him more and caused him to run faster. The horse is said to be of racing blood and when he reached Thirtieth street he was going quite fast.

A short funeral service will be held at Mr. Brasher's residence at 4 p. m. today and the remains will be laid to rest in Hopewell cemetery. There is not a day in the week that scores of horses are not seen standing on the streets unhitched, contrary to an ordinance of long standing.

It, like fast and reckless driving, goes unnoticed until an accident results. Then it is too late. This paper has taken occasion more than once to call attention to careless and fast driving. If people would keep their eyes open they could see much that would cause them sometimes to tremble. Just the day before Mr. Brannon's child met its horrible fate, a lady, leading a little child hardly able to walk, was crossing Main street and a careless driver, thinking the street was his, came near running over the mother and child. We have good laws but they are too often ignored by every one.

TEA IN THE TABLOID FORM

A Good Quality of Tea Is Used by Russian Officers at the Front.

Compressed tea is common enough in Siberia, but an unknown commodity in this country. It is ordinary black tea which is very widely used by the Burials of the trans-Baikal region, by whom the herb thus prepared is drunk, flavored with salt and sour cream. Sugar would be preferred, of course, but it is either unobtainable or too high priced, costing, as it does from 75 cents to $1 a pound.

The compressed tea is of a very good quality. Just now it is of interest because it is used by the Russian officers in Manchuria. The tea is compressed by superb modern machinery, evidence of which is afforded by the splendid specimen of die-sinking on the tablet itself. Such has been the pressure employed that the formerly soft and yielding leaves assume the appearance of a hard tile, which can with difficulty be cut with a knife. As a general rule a mallet or hammer is used to break off a piece, very much as if the tablet were of stone.

The tea employed is a straight Souchong, which needs no cream because nature has given it a slightly creamy taste and also one that is feebly saccharine, so that it requires less sugar than other teas. In flavor this compressed tea cannot be compared with the natural herb. It is much flatter in taste, but possesses the same stimulating properties. A piece the size of a thumbnail is sufficient for a large, strong cup. No tea is necessary. Scalding water is poured on the sugar in the cup and in a few minutes the tea is ready.

No cementing agent whatever is used in compressing high-grade teas—not even sugared water nor artificial heat. The little heat that is generated in compression starts the tannic acid in the leaves, which is all the adhesive required to hold the block together. A tablet thus compressed may be exposed to soaking rains with little danger of injury. As a general rule, however, compressed tea is kept in worsted bags.

German Liver Powder

(Dr. Carlstedt's)

Dr. Carlstedt's German Liver Powder is a wonderful remedy, a prescription used for over fifty years by an eminent German physician in his practice both in Europe and this country, and sold by thousands of druggists all over the world. So mildly natural are the effects of this remedy that all Kidney and Liver troubles give way to perfect health. It cures the worst cases and many have been cured who had tried every known remedy.

Symptoms of Liver Complaint: Dyspepsia, indigestion, rheumatism, gout, eruptions, sallowness, constipation, dizziness, vertigo, headache, piles, pain in the back, melancholy, bad breath, fatty tongue, horrid taste, unpleasant dreams, insomnia, undigestion, nausea, flatulence, swelling of the abdomen, scaly condition of the bowels, pain and soreness in the stomach, liver spots on the skin, loss of memory, impaired vitality, free forebodings, lack of energy, indigestion, crankiness, blood poisoning, nervousness, falling hair—oh, there are lots of them and each one emphasizes the importance of having Dr. Carlstedt's German Liver Powder constantly within reach. It is the right thing at the right time, sure and certain in its effect, pleasant and perfect in action. For your own sake, don't neglect any of the symptoms of liver disorder or the complete breakdown of the system and the ultimate, after untold sufferings, is DEATH. Prices 25c and $1.00.

YOUNG LADIES

Have Narrow Escape In a Runaway at Cerulean.

Miss Lottie Stith, who is visiting friends at Cerulean Springs, suffered a painful accident Sunday, says the Henderson Journal. She had gone for a drive with Miss Irma Goodwin when the horse became frightened and ran away. Both occupants of the vehicle were thrown to the ground, Miss Lottie falling against a barbed wire fence and sustaining a badly torn ear and a broken left arm. The fracture was so close to the shoulder that no little difficulty was experienced in getting the injured member set. Miss Goodwin, as far as can be learned, was not seriously hurt. Miss Lottie's sister, Miss Hattie Stith, is with her at present.

Fraud Exposed.

A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit, through stealing the reputation of remedy which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years. A sure protection, to us, is our name on the wrapper. Look for our name on all Dr. King's, or Bucklen's remedies, as all others are mere imitations. H. E. LONG RUN

Of Fire Department Tuesday, But Little Fire.

A few minutes before twelve o'clock Tuesday an alarm of fire was turned in from West Nineteenth street. The department responded but when they arrived at the scene of the fire it had been extinguished. The roof of the kitchen of Mrs. William Lander had caught from a defective flue, but had done but little damage. It was a long, up-grade run and the horses were pretty well fagged out before returning to the quarters.

LOCKYEAR'S BUSINESS COLLEGE

Hopkinsville, Ky.

State College of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.

The Agricultural and Mechanical (State College) of Kentucky offers the following courses of study, viz: Agricultural, Horticultural, Chemical, Biological, Mathematical, Physical, Normal School, Classical, Mechanical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Civil Engineering, and Mining Engineering, each of which extends over four years and leads to a degree. Post graduate studies are also provided, leading to a master's degree. Each course of study is organized under a separate faculty. The general faculty number nearly fifty professors and instructors.

County appointees receive free tuition, room rent in the dormitories, and light, and if they remain ten months, traveling expenses. The laboratories and museums are large, well equipped, comprehensive and modern.

The Legislature appropriated $60,000 for a college home for young women and $30,000 for drill hall and gymnasium for men. Both buildings are completed and in use. Military tactics and science are fully provided for as required by Congress.

Graduates from the several courses of study readily find excellent positions and liberal remuneration. The demand is largely in excess of the ability of the College to supply.

Specialists with the necessary number of assistants have charge of each department of natural science. Summer schools are provided for pedagogy, engineering, instruction in science and in arts.

The State College of Kentucky, though bearing hitherto the title of "college," is the only institution in the Commonwealth doing, in any proper sense, university work.

The completion of the College home for young women provides facilities for good board and lodging. It is equipped with all modern conveniences, including bath rooms and room for physical culture. It is heated by steam and lighted by electricity.

An opportunity is thus afforded to young women of obtaining a thorough education in classics, modern languages, literature, science, mathematics, logic, metaphysics, history, and political economy.

No other institution in the State offers advantages for education of women at all comparable to those offered by the State College of Kentucky.

Story of Big Trees and the Forestry Building at Portland

Big Logs in the Exposition Structure, But There Is Bigger Timber Still Standing in the Forests.

PORTLAND Ore.—Glad to get to Portland, eh? Journey here you? Don't enjoy long railway trips, perhaps? Not you? Do? Then perhaps your first feeling glimpse from the train of the white fairy city nestling at the foot of the great green bluff made you eager to reach the exposition grounds, and in order to do so you must needs pass through the city? No, it was not that, you say, which makes you glad that you are here? Then it must be because the fame of the Oregon roses has reached you? You are a lover of roses, and you have heard Portland called the rose city. You wanted to see if it was really true that roses grew as big and here as a great spot on the Esplanade, and you have heard Portland called the rose city. You wanted to see if it was really true that roses grew as big and here as a great spot on the Esplanade, and you have heard Portland called the rose city.

Oh, that's it, is it? Glad you are definitely located again? Glad that you know where you are at, at last? Well, you did travel through a bit of timber, to be sure. Nothing small, either, either in Washington or Oregon or their trees, either, eh? Seemed like as though there was no end of it? Ha, ha! And there is a creek in your neck trying to get to the top of the big timber? Must have been a sort of relief to drop your eyes and look off 40, 50 miles to some white-capped peak, glistening in the sun, and see it does make a fellow feel small to see the tremendous scale on which nature has laid out her landscape here. One almost feels lost in the factiveness of some limitless forest as he speeds hour after hour through the big timber. And so you feel easier as you roll into the station, and you realize that towering trees are no longer frowning down upon you, and that the forests on either hand are not pressing in upon you as though to overwhelm you and make you a prisoner of life? Yes, you are willing to admit that you were interested, nay, captivated, by the giant monarchs of the forests. You would not have missed the sight for anything; now would you? And we know that we would not. The overpowering sense of the bigness of things has made its lasting impression upon us, and we realize as never before that it all has to be seen to be appreciated and understood.

We were more than ever anxious to see the Forestry building, the fame of which has gone out into the world wherever tidings of the Lewis and Clark Centennial exposition has spread.

Our first glimpse of the building was gained as we came up through the charming bit of natural park which adjoins the building on one side and which is one of the attractive features of the fair grounds. Through the vista of large trees there loomed before me the biggest log house I have ever seen, or ever expect to see. I guess that the base logs are four or five feet in diameter—measurements are hard to make with the eye under such conditions—and they stand up beside one of them and find that it is considerably above my head. Six feet through and 52 feet long. I try to picture the tree as it stood on its native beach down along the mighty Columbia river. Fifty-two feet and that straight up towards heaven's blue before a single branch breaks forth. I pass through a colonnade of six-foot logs, 30 feet high which supports a gallery over the main entrance, and I find on the other side a similar colonnade of giant logs. Inside the building as I pass through its length, I count 52 columns of fir and cedar trees 40 feet high which support the roof.

As I contemplate the impressive sight, my thoughts go back to the journey through the miles and miles of giant timber, and I think: Well, the trees didn't look quite so big around when I speeded them as they do here. At that moment I overheard the words of a young woman standing near me, and I am startled at what she says:

"Why, papa," she exclaimed, addressing a gentleman standing at her side, "these are not big trees. Why, we have seen plenty of them in the forest that are larger in diameter than any logs in this building."

And the evident disappointment in face and voice told me that the Forestry building has not come up to her expectations, and that there are plenty of bigger logs still uncut in the forest. I find they are residents of the place, and every season take their camping outfit and revel in the heart of the woods and find trees that for size put the logs in the Forestry building to shame. I want me to thinking, and I begin to realize that even the splendid Forestry building made up of its six-foot logs, 52 feet long, cannot tell all the story of the wonderful forests of Washington and Oregon.

Of the 9,450 square miles comprised in the state of Oregon, over 54,000, it is estimated, are covered with timber, nearly one-sixth of the total amount of standing merchantable timber in the United States. This means that there are over 3,000,000,000 feet of standing timber, which, when cut and sawed into lumber, will make piles of lumber which figures are inadequate to express. And the fir, hemlock, cedar, and the spruce are the trees found in the greatest abundance, while the larch, pine, ash, maple, alder, cherry, juniper, cypress, mountain mahogany and cottonwood are also plentiful. But the red, yellow and silver firs are the most valuable commercially. The introduction of which put me in a worse condition than ever was before. Did not take a trouble to let which hurt my stomach so that it would fill with gas and it would throw up my food to my throat. I kept eating, and my stomach such bloated belly, until there seemed no

Washington has a larger percentage of her area wooded than has Oregon, being 70 per cent., or 47,000 square miles. Idaho, which was part of the original Oregon country, discovered by Lewis and Clark, has an area of wooded land which is estimated at 35,000 square miles, or 42 per cent. of the total area of the state.

Last year Oregon cut approximately 1,400,000,000 feet of lumber, valued at $12,650,000. The mills of the Columbia river basin produced 600,000,000 feet, and the Portland mills 45,658,285 feet, and the Astoria mills 71,353,480 feet. The cargo trade from the Columbia river aggregated 164,564,015 feet. Foreign shipments showed a gain of 1,240,161 feet, and domestic shipments an increase of 24,313,653 feet. In addition to this there were over 10,000,000 lath cut.

Washington last year shipped 460, $39,911 feet of lumber to domestic points, including Hawaii, Alaska and Manila. Her foreign shipments to China and Japan, South Africa, Peru, Chili and other South American ports, Mexico, the United Kingdom and Europe totaled 188,144,995 feet. The rail shipments amounted to nearly as much more as the total cargo shipments, being 658,250,000 feet of lumber, and 5,759,640,000 pieces of shingles. Washington has over 85,000 men employed in the lumbering industry, and over $47,000,000 are paid them annually in wages, so it can readily be seen how large and important is the lumbering industry to that state, and Oregon can tell even a bigger story in the matter of men employed and wages paid.

For the first three months of the present year the Pacific Coast Lumber Manufacturers' association reports an aggregate of 359,278,223 feet of lumber, 7,481,415 feet of lath, 654,015 feet of shingles and 18,775,325 shingles in foreign and domestic cargo shipments from the two states.

WAR IS NOW LESS DEADLY

Modern Ordnance Greatly Disorganizes the Hand-to-Hand Encounter.

As we gradually approach our own time we shall find not only that the proportion of those actually slain in battle to the number of those who are wounded shows a sensible decrease, but that the total casualty lists are actually smaller in proportion to the numbers engaged, in spite of the fact that the weapons of war are always described as growing more and more deadly, says the Philadelphia Ledger. In the campaigns of Marlborough there was still much hand-to-hand fighting, for, although artillery had taken its place in the battlefield, the infantry firearms were possessed of little range or accuracy. Accordingly at Blenheim and Malplaquet, two of the most bloody struggles of later times, although the slain show a decreasing ratio, the losses on both sides, out of a total of about 150,000 combatants, were in the former engagement 44,000 killed, wounded and prisoners, while the cost of driving the French from a strong position at Malplaquet was 20,000 killed and wounded out of a force of about 90,000.

Although in the modern armies of more modern time losses have reached in many instances a high figure, yet the percentage of slaughter, especially of killed and wounded combatants, has shown a remarkable decrease from the horrible figures of ancient battles and sieges, before the discovery of gunpowder and of the increasing perfection of firearms—paradoxical as it may appear—began to diminish the butchery which invariably attended the encounter of armed hosts in olden times.

The explanation is that fighting is now carried on at such a distance and in separate bodies of infinitely greater maneuvering power that the least tactical advantage becomes instantly obvious, while the abandonment of armor and the ponderous weapons of the melee has endowed bodies of troops with superior mobility, in both advance and retreat. In old days, when the effective range of the long bow was not more than 18 to 20 score yards, a battle could only be decided by armies coming to close quarters at an early stage of the combat.

The consequence was they became so intermingled that they could with difficulty be separated, and, indeed, the victor was often quite unable to feel assured of success until he found no more of his opponents to slaughter. Moreover, it was much more difficult to make effective use of cover than now, and the bowman of Agincourt was debarr'd from the use of his weapon in the position adopted by his successor, the rifleman of to-day.

The romance of war once associated with the gallantry of lance and helm and the glittering blazon of heraldry is a fascinating regret at this distance of time. But as we speak with hated breath in these less warlike times of scientific armaments and warfare, or shiver at the reports of "terrible" losses in the field, it will be well to remember that we are alarming ourselves quite unnecessarily, and that our warrior ancestors went into action with far greater odds on their becoming dust and their good swords rust than does the soldier who goes up to battle against the lead-pumping weapons of to-day.

Novel Bridecake.
 At a Jewish wedding which took place recently in Calcutta the wedding cake was somewhat of a novelty. After the reception the bride proceeded to cut the cake, which was most beautifully got up and highly ornamented. Half way embedded in the cake was a pistol, which was fired off. Then the bride, putting the knife into the cake, set at liberty a number of live birds, which had been by some artistic arrangement caged in the cake.

Couldn't Miss It.
 "Good heavens, man," exclaimed the long-suffering patient, "you've pulled out the wrong tooth the second time."
 "Never mind, sir," returned the dentist, encouragingly. "I'm bound to get the right one next time, for there were but three in your mouth when I started."—Tit-Bits.

THE EARTH TREMBLED.

Shock Felt at 11:10 O'clock

Monday Night in This City.

FELT ELSEWHERE TOO.

But Few People Were Awake When the Quake Came Here.

A distinct earthquake shock was felt in Hopkinsville and other parts of Kentucky Monday night about 11:10 o'clock. The vibration, according to the observations of several people who felt it, being from North to South.

The shock rattled windows, shook beds so violently as to awaken people who were asleep and caused pictures on the walls to sway back and forth.

The shock lasted from 30 to 45 seconds. It was felt as far North as Louisville, as far West as St. Louis and as far South as Memphis. At Paducah it was reported to be quite severe. No excitement was felt in this city, and but few people who felt it realized that it was a sure enough earthquake, until the papers came with accounts of the shake in other places.

READ THIS!

Milledgeville, Ky., Jan. 1, 1903.—Dr. E. W. Hall, St. Louis, Mo. Dear Sir: I have been a great sufferer from kidney disease and was treated by my home physicians with no benefit. Your Texas Wonder has cured me and I am satisfied it saved my life, and I can cheerfully recommend it to ladies suffering with kidney and bladder troubles. Respectfully,
Mrs. ELIZA FROST.

A Texas Wonder.

One small bottle of the Texas Wonder, Hall's Great Discovery, cures all kidney and bladder troubles, removes gravel, diabetes, seminal emissions, weak and lame backs, rheumatism and all irregularities of the kidneys and bladder in men and women and regulates bladder troubles in children. If not sold by your druggist will be sent by mail on receipt of $1.00. One small bottle is two months treatment and seldom fails to perfect a cure. Dr. E. W. Hall, sole manufacturer, P. O. Box 623, St. Louis, Mo. Send for testimonials. Sold by all druggists and R. C. Hardwick, Hopkinsville.
